Background

Mr. Drake is the managing principal of the Prairie & Wetland Center (PWC) in Belton Missouri, the largest agricultural producer of native wildflowers, grasses, trees, and shrubs in the Midwest USA. He began his career as a wetland scientist with a local environmental consultant. At the Prairie & Wetland Center, approximately 1,500 local professionals, homeowners, and students attend classes each month to learn about natural resource protection, creation, restoration, and management.

Mr. Drake has 20+ years of experience managing and coordinating not-for-profit organizations at the local and regional levels. When combined with his professional experience and personal interest in wetland preservation, he will be a significant contributor to the Midwest Mitigation Oversight Association.
